At the Art Club.
Mrs. J. T. Mastin, president of the State Board of Charities and Corrections, made an interesting and instructive address yesterday afternoon at the Art Club of Richmond. The newly organized class—Students of Richmond Charity—of which Miss Mary Lancaster is president, was host of the occasion, and Miss L. G. Johnston presented Mrs. Mastin to his audience in a very happily worded little speech. He talked particularly about the retarded children in the schools and the work among the feeble-minded of the city and State, as well as the practical application of methods for their training. He paid special tribute to Margaret McGuire, the Philadelphia teacher, who first used a system for examining backward pupils, and explained the length the present Binet-Simon test, which originated in Paris.

Nearly all delinquent children are backward, and the greatest cause of criminality in the world is feeble-mindedness. Dr. Mastin explained the test now used in all Richmond schools with Miss Webb at the head. Manual training and all sorts of art work that would encourage such children, and it is a known fact that a child that can't learn to write can learn to draw.

POINCARÉ NOT SURE HE WILL HOLD OFFICE

Several of His Predecessors Forced to Resign Before Their Terms Ended.

BY LA MARQUISE DE FONTENAY.
PRESIDENT POINCARÉ does not feel by any means assured that he will complete his seven years' term as chief magistrate of France. This is indicated by the fact that having just resigned his house in the Rue du Commandant Marchand, in Paris, to an acquaintance, he has had the lease drawn up, that it terminates whenever he chooses to be President.

It must be borne in mind that several of his predecessors, namely, Thiers, Marshal MacMahon and Casimir Perier, were all driven to resign, by the intolerable conditions created for them by the Cabinet of the day.

Grevy was ousted from the day; while in consequence of the unsavory scandals in which his son-in-law, Daniel Wilson, became involved while residing under his roof at the Elysée Palace.

Thiers, who had been an administrator composed for the most part of his personal friends, who had voted for his election. The new Cabinet is composed of his bitterest political adversaries, all of them men who opposed his election, while the most influential member, Joseph Caillaux, Minister of Finance, has for the last few months gone about the country publicly proclaiming his intention of never resting until he has compelled Poincaré to abandon the chief magistracy.

As Poincaré is a man of a masterful character, who is determined to avail himself to the utmost of the constitutional prerogatives and powers of his office; also to resist any attempts by the new Cabinet to restrict these powers, a conflict between the administration and the President may be looked for at an early date.

That Poincaré will put up with the slights, the affronts and the contemptuous neglect to which his predecessors have been subjected by some of the Cabinets of the day is not for one moment to be believed. He will never permit the Minister of Foreign Affairs, for instance, to carry on negotiations with foreign powers in the name of the Republic, without his knowledge and consent. When Casimir Perier was President, the Minister of Foreign Affairs actually declined to communicate to him any of the dispatches from French ambassadors, or communications from foreign powers.

It is possible, however, that the end Poincaré may become disgusted with the entire situation created by the hostility of the present Cabinet, and may throw up the presidency in anger, incompunct with his sense of self-respect, dignity and honor of mind. That is what Minister of Finance Joseph Caillaux has evidently in view.

Neither Poincaré nor his wife, are comfortable at the Elysée, and they have not existed there for long, either in a museum or in a very uncomfortable hotel. In their private apartments they have now, however, got rid of most of the official furniture, which had served their predecessors, and have installed their own furniture. Instead, their pictures, their hangings, their bric-a-brac, etc.

The President has had some trouble in insuring this property. For, curiously enough, no buildings belonging to the French Government are ever insured, and the companies have therefore a certain hesitation about insuring their contents, more especially as the carelessness and unreliability of the guardians of public buildings in France against fire and robbery are proverbial.

Lord De La Warr, who recently returned from America to England, was conspicuous by his absence at the marriage of his daughter, Lady Edina Sackville, to Euan Wallace, a subaltern of the Horse Guards, in London the other day. Lady Edina, who has been a frequent visitor over here, making prolonged stays at Ottawa, and in New York, 300 at Edinburgh, in Vermont, the country place of Mr. and Mrs. Seward Webb, was given away by her grandfather, old Lord Brassey, the wedding taking place at his house in Park Lane.

Her father, Lord De La Warr, was divorced by her mother ten years ago, the custody of the three children of the marriage being awarded to Lady De La Warr—the Muriel Brassey of the "Voyage of the Sunbeam." Since then Lord De La Warr has married again, and is now in the United States, being divorced by his second wife, at the same time being subjected to a grueling examination and cross-examination in the Court of Bankruptcy, where the showing which he is making has excited the strongest opinion of the presiding judge, and the indignation of his creditors.

Meanwhile, of course, the earl is debauched from occupying his seat in the House of Lords as a hereditary legislator, and will be barred therefrom until he has managed to secure his discharge from the Court of Bankruptcy; a contingency which appears at present extremely remote.

Lord Headley, the Irish peer whose conversion to Islam was recently announced, has assumed the Moslem name of Saifurrahman Sheikh Rahmahillah Park. There are several mosques in England, notably one at Liverpool; and in London the principal Imam, or chief ecclesiastical dignitary who presides at the weekly devotions on every Friday, is Khwaja Kamal-Ud-Deen, formerly a member of the Indian Bar, who abandoned a lucrative legal practice in Lahore in order to become an Imam, and to minister to the spiritual needs of Muslims in Great Britain.

At these weekly devotions the worshippers remove their shoes, but keep their heads covered. Those who do not wear the regulation fez, tie their handkerchiefs in turban, and wear slippers. There are no chairs, but white prayer mats. Upon these the congregation stand, kneel or prostrate themselves, according to the requirements of the liturgy.

A considerable amount of confusion has been caused in connection with the identity of Lord Headley, and it is generally assumed that the new convert to Islam was the fourth baron. But this peer died last spring, after a most adventurous career. The convert is his brother, a civil engineer by profession, and recently the principal authority in the United Kingdom on the protection and improvement of foreshores and on harbor construction. He is also a notable sportsman, who, when at Cambridge, won the middle and heavyweight championship at boxing, and has written several standard works on the art of self-defense.

Much to the disgust of Sir Henry Wombwell, and to the surprise of his friends and acquaintances, he has inherited nothing but the baronetcy from his elder brother, the late Sir George, one of the heroes of the Boer war, in charge of the Light Brigade at the battle of Balaklava, and who died a few weeks ago. Sir George left not a penny piece to his brother, but everything, including Newburgh Priory, with its entire rent roll, to his widow, Lady Julia, sister of the Earl of Jersey. At her death everything is to go to her grandchild, namely, the second of the boys of Sir George's youngest daughter, Cecilia, married to William Gerard Menzies, of Halifax, in Fife.

Newburgh Priory is one of the grandest places in Yorkshire, the surrounding lands being of a very extensive character, while the mansion contains the remains of Oliver Cromwell, which are entombed in the wall at the end of a small chamber at the top of the house, behind a great mass of stone, bearing an inscription to the effect that the Lord Protector's body lies behind it.

Sir Henry Wombwell is now seventy-three years of age, very impetuous, was formerly in the Royal Horse Guards, afterwards for many years an unsuccessful theatrical impresario, as well as owner of one of the Liverpool theatres; while at present he is the poorly paid secretary of the London and oldest clubs in London. Three or four years ago he succeeded in obtaining the hand of the Hon. Myrtle Mostyn, half a century his junior, and sister of Lord Vaux of Harrowden; his bride and her family being led to believe that she would in course of time become the chatelaine of Newburgh Priory and the mistress of the large fortune connected therewith.

The disposition of Sir George's will also cuts out of the succession to the property the little three-year-old boy of the late Captain Frederick Wombwell, of the sixteenth Hussars, a nephew of Sir George. The boy is now next in the line of succession to the Wombwell baronetcy.

VESSLS AT HOME FROM LONG CRUISE
In Teeth of Gale, Battleships Come Into New York Port.
NEW NAVAL RECORD IS MADE
Fleet Covers 9,000 Miles and Carries Its Own Supplies.

New York, December 16.—The battleships Wyoming, Arkansas, Utah and Florida came into port out of the teeth of a gale, having sailed on the 21st of October, a voyage of 9,000 miles. They were a part of the fleet that left Hampton Roads October 25 for the Mediterranean in a pleasure trip for officers and men, and to demonstrate that a squadron of United States battleships can cross the Atlantic and return without having recourse to foreign ports for supplies. There were in all nine battleships in the fleet, and just an ounce of coal oil or provisions was purchased during their more than seven weeks' absence from American shores. This is a record in the United States Navy, the officers said today. Three colliers and a provision ship carried all the necessities enough to have sustained the fleet much longer, if necessary, it was said.

Of the rest of the fleet, the Vermont is bound for Norfolk with a broken shaft, and the rest of the fleet, the Colorado, the Oregon and the Kansas are on their way to Mexico, and the Ohio to Guantanamo, with two small colliers on board, who will be landed there. After disinfection and proper quarantine the ships will proceed to Mexico.

The ships that came in yesterday were somewhat battered from their encounter at fifteen knots with mountainous seas, but no serious defect was reported. It was the first storm that the Superdreadnought Wyoming, Admiral Badger's flagship, had been called upon to weather, and while the seas did slight damage to parts of her superstructure, her officers said her behavior was all that could be desired.

With the exception of the accident to the Vermont, the officers expressed satisfaction because at no time had there been trouble with engines or machinery and no necessity of slowing down. They were pleased, also, to have been complimented at every port on the fine appearance of the ships, and the behavior of the men on shore leave. At Naples, Genoa, Villa Franca, Marseilles and Malta, which were all visited by one or more of the ships, the most hospitable welcome—both official and popular—was extended.

The sailors were given the maximum shore leave, long enough to permit them to take extended sight-seeing trips through France and Italy. Out of a quota of nearly 19,000 men there were only five desertions, an unusual record, it was said.
